

Native American Business Training Course Begins January 2010

Have you ever thought about starting your own business? The Small Business Development Center at Jamestown Community College will be offering a combination on-line/in-person class soon. This is a newly developed, introductory course, teaching business ownership basics in a context uniquely formatted for native persons.

The first class is open to everyone, with a cost of $20 due at the in-person session. Please note that we will need at least ten students registered in order to hold the class. The cost for the balance of the course, which will be taught in three (3) on-line modules and one (1) final in-person class is $89 per student; tuition reimbursement is available upon successful completion of the class. Please call JCC to register at 338-1024 as soon as possible.

Topics Covered

- Being a Native American Entrepreneur
- Why Businesses Succeed or Fail
- Starting a New Business
- Managing Your Business
- Basic Record Keeping
- Marketing and Selling
- People Skills & Customer Service
- The Business Plan
- Group Dynamics

When:

January 26th – Feb. 23rd, 2010

Where:

We will hold only the first class and last class in-person on territory; on 1/26 @ 5:30 p.m. at the Jo Jo Redeye Building dining room –and- on 2/23 @ 5:30 at Saylor Building dining room. The remainder of the course will be held online, so you will need to access the internet on your own.

For More Information, contact:

Karla Nephew, Planning Department, at 532-4900, ext. 5066, or karla.nephew@sni.org.